PCIP data.

This bit of information, placed on your copyright page, is helpful for selling books. The Library of Congress does not furnish CIP data to self-publishers. We generate this data to make your book more accessible to schools and public libraries and to help librarians find and shelve your book.

Complete content editing

Everything that you submit for your book will get the careful attention of one of our experienced editors. This includes your author's biography, acknowledgements or dedication page and any additional information you would like to print for example a charity donation page or parents' resource page.

ISBN number and barcode.

We will assign you a Big Tent Books ISBN number with its corresponding EAN bar code if you choose. This may not be the best option for you but it is available to you at no cost if you want it.

Project Manager.

Every book at Dragonpencil is led by a project manager. Your designer will make recommendations on the size of your book, the layout of the book, and the placement and number of illustrations. It is your project manager's job to know what the status of your book is and ensure that we are always doing the best possible job for you. You can always turn to this person with questions about your book.

Book designer.

You will be assigned a book designer in phase 3 of your project. When the illustrations are completed, your designer will assemble the front and back covers and interior of your book, preparing it to be printed. Your book designer is an important member of your project team which also includes your editor, illustrator, and project manager.
